PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

A New Year - A New Match

Jackie Payne, USTA Texas President

Suffice it to say, we've all been anticipating this New Year and – for USTA Texas – that brings unique opportunities. As Texas' president, I have the privilege of working collaboratively with Management Committee members that represent all geographic parts of the section and I look forward to meeting volunteers and others who want to continue making a positive impact – through our wonderful sport of tennis – in their own communities.

The Management Committee and USTA Texas staff have developed a modified volunteer engagement structure that has been introduced to amplify our predetermined goals. They, along with our leadership team of Council and Project chairs, will ensure Texas unpacks three specific core goals that were unanimously agreed upon during the Management Committee's strategic planning sessions held last summer.

As we strive to bring more individuals to the game across all platforms, we are committed to:

- Uniting the Texas tennis ecosystem
- Realigning staff and volunteer engagement in concert with programming
- Achieving financial sustainability

We will embrace holistic and collaborative approaches via project team work to ensure long-time aficionados are retained, while we expand our customer base and engage newcomers to help find their niche.

Tennis serves a broad audience that continues to change; therefore we cannot rest on our laurels. Through its goals, USTA Texas is aligned to engage diverse individuals, groups and communities by providing greater access to the game on all levels. It's an exciting time for our Texas team, and I trust you'll join in contributing to the synergy as we move forward with increased volunteer opportunities.

We have a wonderful story to share, and I invite you to stay tuned by following USTA Texas on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram.

The Management Committee of USTA Texas for the 2021-22 term includes:

• Jackie Payne, Amarillo	• Luis Valdez, Denton	• Becki Wortham, San Antonio
• Kevin Collins, San Angelo	• Lara Lehmann, Houston	• Tom Hunt, Corpus Christi
• Brandon Myers, Dallas	• Dennis McWilliams, Austin	• Emily Schaefer, Houston

VAN'S ADVANTAGE

A Celebration of Texas Tennis

Van Barry, USTA Texas Chief Executive Officer and Executive Director

As you are reading this article it will be about 12 months since USTA programming was suspended in Texas and across the country. Without recounting all of the incredible challenges we have gone through since that time, I want to share what I consider some very inspirational information.

Texas tennis is incredibly robust and getting stronger each month. That's not meant to minimize the challenges that local communities are experiencing around the state, but as a whole we are doing very well. As a quick example, tennis play in our two largest programs, junior tournaments (both number of events and total participation) and adult leagues, were higher in January of 2021 as compared to January of 2020 which was pre-COVID. Similar numbers were occurring throughout last fall as we worked through all of the processes and procedures necessary to host safe events.

In my mind, that is an amazing statistic and is a testament to the incredible work that our Texas volunteers and staff at the local and section levels have done. You may recall that Texas was one of the very first states to resume USTA programming last summer and that momentum has clearly carried through the past eight months. The flexibility and willingness to adjust quickly, and sometimes often, to create a calendar, secure venues and work with providers is what has made our return to the courts so successful. Without the support and understanding of you, our consumers, none of this would have been possible. While most of the country is currently unable to run USTA programming, Texas is leading the way in almost every participatory number.

I'd like to share one further number that will further illustrate the impact tennis is having on our society. As tennis was accurately recognized as a very safe sport during the early stages of the pandemic, 4 million new and former players picked up tennis last year. Tennis had by far the largest increase of any mainstream activity in the country. Now the challenge for all of our tennis ecosystem is to engage and retain these new folks. It's a key component of the strategic plan President Jackie Payne mentioned in her article this month and I referenced in this magazine last fall.

So I would like to conclude with a heartfelt thank you to all our volunteers, providers, players, parents and coaches who supported tennis across Texas throughout the past year. I praise everyone's ability to stay positive and equally know that Texas is in a strong position to lead tennis into the next phase of our journey.

As always your questions, comments and observations are welcomed at vbarry@texas.usta.com.

ORANGE BOWL

Krueger Goes
Back-to-Back

By Paul Ryan

Bianca Andreescu, Ashlyn Krueger.

That is the list of the most recent women to win the Orange Bowl 18s title one year after winning the 16s crown.

"It's really cool," Krueger says. "I never thought I would be mentioned in the same sentence as her but it's really cool to hear that."

While Andreescu stands at 5-foot-7, Krueger is an imposing figure on the court at 6-foot-1. Her height allows her to shorten the court and move forward to take away space from her opponents. It was something she was able to do in her 6-4, 6-4 victory in the finals against Jana Kolodynska of Belarus.

"I think the biggest difference was that right off the bat, it was a tough match" Krueger says. "In 16s, I could ease my way into the match and I didn't have to be as quick to problem solve. In 18s, every match was a tough match and I had to 100% focus every single point."

The 16-year-old's experience in the 16s tournament allowed her to mature and improve her mental game going into 2020. Krueger got "way more upset" in 2019, but made her fortitude into one of her strengths this past year.

"When I get negative, I don't play well," Krueger says. "For everyone I train with, it's important to stay positive and to not forget that you started because it's fun and you're still playing because it's fun. But staying positive is so important, it's one of the biggest things I try to focus on."

Much like the US Open, crowds at the Orange Bowl in 2020 were pretty much nonexistent due to COVID-19. Outside of family and coaches, the stands were all but empty for the entirety of the tournament.

The tournament went to great lengths to provide a safe environment for all involved, requiring negative tests before admittance and masks being worn at all times except when actively playing tennis.

"It was different," Krueger says. "There weren't a lot of people watching obviously, but everyone was still focused, everyone was still engaged. It was very put together, even more so with everything going on. I just think the energy was not as high."

For Krueger and tennis players of all skill levels, the past year has been difficult in terms of getting tournaments in. With all the cancellations due to COVID, the amount of tournaments for Krueger were cut in half. Due to this, a set schedule isn't really in the cards, so Krueger has had to be flexible.

"I'm not really sure [what's next], whatever kind of comes up and we decide to go to is what I'll play," Krueger says. "It's definitely been tough not knowing if something is going to stay or if something is going to get cancelled. My coach, Dave Licker, has been really on top of everything which is awesome, but it's definitely annoying. You've just got to hang in there and see what happens."

While 2020 has come and gone with another Orange Bowl title, Krueger still has plenty left to accomplish. Her biggest goal for 2021 is to compete in a junior Grand Slam, and with her Orange Bowl performances, she will likely get that chance.

Dreslin Honored By USTA

By Paul Ryan

In December, USTA Texas volunteer Joyce Dreslin received the USTA Volunteer Exceptional Service Award (for more than 10 years), given to a National Committee member for their outstanding contributions to growing the game of tennis.

"For over 30 years, Joyce has served the tennis community as a national, sectional and local volunteer," said Craig Morris, USTA Chief Executive, Community Tennis. "She is an incredible advocate and an invaluable expert resource. We are so grateful for all her years of dedication, particularly with her work in adaptive tennis that has impacted many lives through her passion and devotion."

In a typical year, award winners would be honored in person at the USTA Annual Meeting before a ballroom filled with hundreds of people. However, due to COVID-19, the 2020 awards ceremony had to be held virtually. For Dreslin, she's a bit more comfortable behind the scenes than in front of the camera.

"I'm a writer, not a speaker," she says with a laugh.

That's certainly an understatement. Dreslin previously worked at McGraw-Hill as an editor in New York City before she moved to Texas and as a freelancer for them after she did. When her daughter started playing tournaments, Dreslin realized the junior structure could be more efficient.

"I always say the USTA is sort of like the PTA," Dreslin says. "When you complain about something, you get the job. How I really got involved was there was a guy in Houston who was putting out a newsletter and he was only covering Houston. So of course I wrote a letter of complaint and the guy said, 'well, would you be able to cover the rest of the state?'

"So I started writing a regular column of my adventures as a tennis mother. It was all new to me. I didn't know anything, and I was learning on the fly. I said in one of my columns I didn't even have a folding chair to be a tennis mother, and somebody left a folding chair on my front porch with my name inscribed on the back."

This started Dreslin's run of over 20 years on the Publications/Communications Committee for Texas, serving as Vice Chair in 1984 before chairing the committee from 1985-

2006. Several years into her time with the Texas Tennis Association, then-Executive Director Ben Ball approached her about joining a National Committee.

"I said, 'what is it? I don't know,'" Dreslin recalls. "And he says, 'well you'll have to go to Hawaii' and I said, 'ok I think I could do that.'"

In 1989, Dreslin started her journey as a National Committee member. In 2019, she received her 30 year pin for volunteer service from USTA National, while also reaching 35 years with USTA Texas. During that time, she has also volunteered with the US Open, as Chair of the USTA Volunteer Lounge for over 20 years and giving tours of Arthur Ashe Stadium.

However, what Dreslin is most known for within USTA is her work with the Adaptive Committee.

"I got involved through Dennis Van Der Meer," Dreslin says. "His wife had a stroke. He used to bring her to the meetings and initially, she was in a wheelchair, she couldn't even smile."

"He told me that he was rehabbing his wife with tennis because with tennis, you use both sides of your brain. With a stroke, one side of your brain becomes weak, so you need to build it up by forcing it to work. I was only seeing them twice a year at the USTA Meetings, so I could see this incredible progress she was making. She started in a wheelchair, then she's talking and walking, then she's on a committee."

Dreslin has served on the National Adaptive Tennis Committee since 2009 and just completed a term as chair for USTA Texas in 2020. Shortly after Dreslin saw Pat Van Der Meer recover from her stroke, her own husband suffered one.

"I said, 'how can I do what Dennis did and rehab my husband through tennis?'" Dreslin says. "I certainly wasn't anywhere near the tennis player that Dennis Van Der Meer was, nor did I have any experience in teaching, so what I did is set up an adaptive program with stroke outpatients from Baylor Rehab in Dallas, and we used the Village Tennis Center. I got some grants from the USTA and equipment from USTA Texas so I could pay professionals to feed the balls. I pick up balls very well."

Dreslin now takes her husband to the NeuroFitness Foundation in Euless twice a week where he rehabs at the gym. While she was there as her husband rehabbed, she wondered how else she could help.

"It's a non-profit organization, so it doesn't have very much money," Dreslin says. "Somebody found out that I knew how to write and they asked, 'Can you help us get some grants?' Last year, we got two different $25,000 grants from other foundations. I recently introduced them to tennis-asa-rehab method with help from USTA Texas TSRs Cindy Benzon and Laura Gilbert. They loved it!"

For her amazing work, Dreslin will be honored with the 2020 USTA Texas Henry C. Cox Adaptive Tennis Award. The award was first introduced in 2019 and given to its namesake, so Dreslin will become the first person to receive the award not named Henry Cox.

"I called Henry and said 'hey, who do you think should get the next award?'" said Cindy Benzon, USTA Texas Adaptive and Wheelchair Coordinator. "Without a doubt, Joyce was his No. 1 choice. She helps in so many different ways behind the scenes."

"I think she's been on every committee for USTA Texas. Darn close."

Dreslin is always someone that can be counted upon when you need her. She is always looking to help out where she can and volunteer for the sport she loves.

USTA Texas Announces 2020 Award Winners

Each year, USTA Texas honors individuals, families and organizations that have dedicated their time to fulfilling the USTA Texas mission to promote and develop the growth of tennis in Texas.

USTA Texas would like to thank the award winners for all they do to grow our sport.

W.T. Caswell Service Award

Dennis McWilliams, Lakeway

Dennis is a tremendous asset to the Texas tennis community. For the past 40 years, Dennis has been involved with the local communities in Dallas and Austin, with USTA Texas and now serves on the Management Committee and a National Committee. He exemplifies a true leader deserving of the Caswell Service Award.

-Carol Welder

Lloyd Sessions Educational Merit Award

Manuel Moreno, Galveston

Manny, humble in nature, has made a positive impact on the lives of so many children. He possesses a gift that enables him to connect with each of his students in a way that helps empower them to unlock their full potential. He truly wants tennis to be the sport of opportunity: an opportunity for children from all facets of life to learn and play the sport, but more importantly, an opportunity for them to succeed.

-Katy Rogers

USTA Texas Member Organization of the Year Capital Area Tennis Association, Austin

CATA's service to the community is designed to impact Austin's engagement with the sport of tennis by means of providing an exceptional tennis experience whether through recreational, competitive, junior or adult tennis programs. The impact, we hope, is a strong commitment to prioritizing tennis and good health.

-Elizabeth Hanson Smith

USTA Texas Community Service Award Phillippa Nierling, Dallas

Phillippa is all about serving and giving back to her family, friends and community at large, both on and off the tennis court. Since joining the DTA's Board of Directors in 2000, she has dedicated her talents to create new ways to reach tennis players of all abilities and she generously supports programs to ensure their success.

-Laura Worsham

USTA Texas Senior Spirit of Tennis Award, Male Ron Fisher, Houston

Fisher has given years of volunteer service to tennis. He is a former member of the Houston Tennis Association Board of Directors; president of the USTA Texas Section and chair and member of committees involved in senior tennis. He has served as chair of both the Houston Racquet Club Senior Activities Committee and the USTA Senior Competition Committee.

-Terry St. John

USTA Texas Senior Spirit of Tennis Award, Female Brenda Latta, Georgetown

She does many things beyond tennis to maintain her fitness so that she would be a strong competitor in the extreme heat of the Sectional tournaments. She is such a team player and is always willing to do what is necessary to help the team. And with all her accomplishments this season, it is hard to believe she is in her 60s!

-Janie Honeycutt

USTA Texas Family of the Year

The Anirban Dutta Family, Coppell

The Duttas have been collectively involved with USTA for over 20 years. Anirban has been a USTA volunteer as a member of the Diversity & Inclusion Committee and has served as chair for the last three terms. Julie and the kids, Maya and Jai, have volunteered with DTEA in helping out with kids school programs as well as other community based activities.

-Laura Worsham

USTA Texas Randy Snow Wheelchair Tennis Service

Award

Jenny Lee, The Woodlands

A great leader elevates the spirit of others to a higher plateau and paves a righteous trial for them. They invest their most precious asset-time-to the betterment of the soul of others, all while giving and loving unconditionally. My mentor and dear friend, Jenny Lee has been a beacon of light for the Spring Rollers community.

-Carlos Salinas

USTA Texas Henry C. Cox Adaptive Tennis Award

Joyce Dreslin, Arlington

Joyce has been a part of USTA Texas for over 35 years. She served as chair of the Adaptive/Wheelchair Committee for Texas in 2019-2020 and has represented Texas on National Adaptive Committee for several terms. She does whatever she is asked to do.

-Henry Cox

Ray Delcastillo Official of the Year Award

Tomoko King, Houston

Over the past 13 years, Tomoko has worked many of our USTA events in Texas and is certified as a Rover, Referee, Chair, and Line Official. Tomoko has worked many professional events across the nation including multiple US Opens! From grassroots to the professional level, Tomoko is one of the finest Officials in Texas AND the United States.
